30 MEN AND CORPORATIONS ARE HIT BY INDICTMENT BOMB!

Sixteen Icemen, Seven Corporations, Three Workmen, One Sub-Contractor, Two Aldermen and an Outsider Said to Be Named In True Bills.

It was reported about the Criminal Court building to-day that secret indictments had been found against sixteen ice men, seven corporations, three workmen and one sub-corporation in connection with the school house case. and two aldermen and one other man in connection with the Chelsea case.

In response to summonses served upon them on Saturday and early to-day a number of the score or more of men reported to have been named in the secret indictments arrived at the court house shortly after noon to-day to be present in Judge Harris's court at 2 o'clock.

Eager Crowd at the Courthouse.

The arrival of the men who were reported to have been indicted as violators of the law was awaited by a large crowd and there was an air of excitement about the District Attorney's office such as has not previously prevailed there since Mr. Moran assumed his duties.

All sorts of rumors were rife as to the number of persons indicted and as to their identity. Most of the reports were based upon the actions of the police inspectors who were called upon to serve the notices to the persons involved.

It was agreed by everybody that the District Attorney had scored in the ice cases, the Chelsea aldermanic matter and in the schoolhouse cement investigation. Indictments, variously estimated in number, it was declared could confidently be expected to be announced in all of these cases.

30 INDICTMENTS RUMORED.

The total number of secret indictments were put by some as high as thirty. These were divided between individuals and corporations, twenty-two being given to the former and eight to the latter. Another put the individual indictments at twenty and those against corporations at half a dozen.

It was reported that certain men who have been mentioned in connection with the Grand Jury investigations were busy early to-day arranging for bail. This was taken to mean that they regarded their receipt of summonses tantamount to announcements that they had been caught in the Grand Jury drag net.

Serving of Warrants.

A force of inspectors, including Ainslee C. Armstrong and Silas Waite, was busy early to-day serving indictment warrants on the men who are asked to be present at the courthouse at 2 o'clock in connection with the findings of the Grand Jury. Some of the warrants were served on Saturday, but as the inspectors were unable to find some of the men for whom they were looking they continued their work to-day.

The policy was adopted of not making any arrests, but simply serving the papers on the persons named in the indictments or on someone representing the corporations involved, instructing such persons to be present in Judge Robert O. Harris's court at 2 o'clock to-day.

When asked directly about Marcus M. Estabrook, the president of the Highland Co-operative Ice Company, who made himself famous by his enunciation of the Soak 'Em doctrine at the annual dinner of the Massachusetts Ice Dealers' Association on April 5 of the present year, Mr. Moran failed to recollect the name.

"May Infer What You Please."

"He is the president of the Highland Co-operative Ice Company," said the reporter, "one of the members of the Massachusetts Ice Dealers' Association who was not before the Grand Jury during the inquiry, and whose absence was considered significant. Am I to infer that he has not been indicted because he was not called to testify?"

"You may infer what you please," replied Mr. Moran. "I have men in Charles Street Jail at the present time who are indicted for manslaughter, and I did not call upon them to testify before the Grand Jury."

Alderman Thomas E. Ruggles and Benjamin P. Nichols of Chelsea have received notices to visit the District Attorney's office this afternoon. When Alderman Nichols got home Saturday night he found a card bearing Special Officer Waite's name and on the reverse side was a note requesting him to visit the District Attorney Monday afternoon.

Chelsea Graft Cases.

"I suppose it means that I have been indicted," said Mr. Nichols; "and it is simply a polite way of arresting me. While I don't know that I have been indicted, this is the presumption upon which I am going to visit the District Attorney."

Alderman Ruggles said that he dosen't think he has been indicted.

All the other men involved in the graft charges, with the exception of Alderman White who could not be found, deny that they have been notified to call upon the district attorney. The findings of the aldermanic committee, together with the transcript of the testimony heard under oath by them, was turned over to Mr. Moran by the Chelsea Board of Aldermen.

With reference to Alderman Ruggles, the finding made by the committee was "that he indirectly profited as the result of the contract awarded to his son to reconstruct a part of the Chelsea north draw, and we, therefore, believe that the law with reference to members of the city government doing business with the city, directly or indirectly, has been violated by him."

The committee reported that Alderman Nichols had made to Alderman Clarence A. Warren a proposition contained in the following conversation testified by Mr. Warren:

"A Matter of $50 or So."

"Now I know you would not take money, and I know that Alderman Gates would not take money, but you are friendly with Alderman Gates and associated in the church with him and in the Y. M. C. A., and I think you have influence enough with him to get him to vote for Mr. Hall for auditor. I should not expect you to do that for nothing, and if a matter of $50 or so would be any inducement to you to use your influence with Alderman Gates I should like to have you do so.

With reference to Alderman White, the aldermanic committee reported that it believed he made a proposition to Alderman Alfred F. Cornell designed to secure from Hudson Hall, a candidate for auditor, the sum of $150 for the "control" of his (Cornell's) vote and his own (White's) vote.

10,000 HOLD UP 3 MILES OF CONEY ISLAND CARS

B. R. T. YIELDS AFTER BRUTAL BATTLE FOR ILLEGAL FARE—PARKER AS COUNSEL.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—After sixteen hours of continuous riot along the Coney Island lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system, the railroad company despaired of compelling its patrons to submit to its illegal demand for a second five cents, and at 4 o'clock to-day Road Superintendent William Maybury paid out of his own pockets the excess fares for over 10,000 passengers asleep in the cars that were stalled for a distance of three miles between Kensington station and Coney Island.

UNABLE TO EJECT 10,000 FROM CARS.

This surrender of the company came only when its 300 special officers, worn out after sixteen hours of beating and throwing patrons off the cars, were unequal to the task of ejecting the 10,000 passengers that sat resolutely in a line of stalled cars three miles long. If the road had attempted to continue the violent tactics of the day against these passengers its service would have been so crippled that it would be unable to meet the demands of its regular traffic this morning.

Deputy Police Commissioner O'Keefe to-day revoked all the appointments of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit force of special officers who were yesterday dragging from the cars all persons refusing to pay a second fare over the Coney Island lines.

Ex-Judge Parker and Ex-Governor Black have been retained by the railroad to defend the legality of the 10-cent fare.

The rioting was due to the decision of Justice Gaynor on Saturday that passengers had the right to refuse to pay a second fare to Coney Island.

DAMAGE SUITS THREATENED.

Suits aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars in damages will undoubtedly be filed against the road for yesterday's brutal tactics. Other legal steps will also be taken immediately to force the Brooklyn Rapid Transit to respect Judge Gaynor's decision.

Trouble started shortly before noon yesterday at Neck avenue and Gravesend road where the Brooklyn Rapid Transit special police began to assault and eject passengers who refused to pay a second fare. The result was a blockade that tied up traffic so badly that cars leaving the Brooklyn Bridge at 3 o'clock did not reach Coney Island until 7 o'clock. This state of affairs continued throughout the night.

Return traffic was in worse state until Assistant Commissioner of Police O'Keefe, realizing that the 250,000 persons on the island would have to be got home, decided the situation constituted a public emergency, and insisted on the cars being run through, whether the company got its second fare or not. He had to arrest Dow F. Smith, the general superintendent of the road; H. C. Davis, superintendent of the Culver division, and several motormen before he broke the blockade.

Then things went smoothly for a while, until Superintendent Smith got out of jail and reissued his orders to hold up traffic while excess fares were collected. This resulted in Smith's rearrest about 11 o'clock last night, but he was soon set at liberty again.

PAID FOR EXCESS FARES.

Smith again tied up the road, and his special officers began assaulting and ejecting passengers at the Kensington station. Finally Road Superintendent Maybury rode up in an automobile and went from car to car, asking each condutor how many excess fares he lacked and paying him out of his own pocket when he was told the number. The cars then began moving and the blockade was lifted.

Acting Police Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo to-day declared that he would vigorously enforce the law against the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company.

SET FALSE SIGNALS.

He said that he believed the police should have made arrests whenever passengers were assaulted by train men, and that he would require a special report on the alleged setting of false signals by tower men, who thereby assisted in holding up the cars.

"This is an especially serious offence, it seems to me," said the acting commissioner, "and if it is found to be true the offenders will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law."

CLINTON GIRL SENT TO REFORM SCHOOL

CLINTON, Aug. 13.—In Police Court to-day Mabel Ruth Wheeler of this town was sentenced to the State Reform School at Lancaster to remain until she is 21. She is now in her fifteenth year. In court she wept bitterly when she heard her sentence. Her parents, who had complained that they could not keep her at home and alleged that she had a habit of running away to beaches and summer resorts, were not present.

FIGHTING BOB'S MEN ON MARCH AROUND CAPE

Heavily Laden, Khaki Clad, with Field Gun, They Leave Ships at Rockport.

Special to the Boston American.

ROCKPORT, Aug. 13.—With Admiral Robley D. Evans in command of his big North Atlantic squadron once more and his blue flag with its two stars fluttering from the foremast of the battleship Maine, the sailors and soldiers returned to-day to hard work after their thirty-six-hour holiday.

About 10:30 a. m. 600 marines from various warships disembarked and were rowed to the shore. Led by a fine fife and drum corps they took up the line of march for Gloucester, around Cape Ann, every man bearing his knapsack, blanket and rifle.

They marched to Gloucester by way of Pigeon Cove, Bay View and Annisquam, a distance of eleven miles, and were accompanied by an ambulance corps and one field piece. The return march was by the State road, a distance of but six miles.

The fleet is still riding at anchor in the bay and it is not known if the deep sea war manoeuvres will be made to-day. Yesterday there were from 25,000 to 30,000 people here to visit the fleet. The mass meeting in the lawn in front of the Town Hall was attended by 1,500 sailors and marines.

Last night for a half hour the fleet gave a searchlight illumination and at the same time Nature fairly rivaled the attraction from the warships by a magnificent display of Northern lights.

WOMAN FINDS $1,500 GEMS THOUGHT STOLEN

"THEY HAD ONLY BEEN MISPLACED," WORD GIVEN OUT FOR MRS. HOLMES.

Considerable mystery surrounds the sudden finding to-day of $2,500 worth of jewels owned by Mrs. Charles D. Holmes, a Boston society woman who is a guest at the Rockland House, Nantasket Beach. The police have been notified that the valuables were found, and have been requested to keep the whole matter a secret.

The jewelry which was missing consisted of the following:

One diamond sunburst.
One diamond brooch.
One diamond ring.
One pair of diamond ear rings.

Mrs. Holmes's husband is a partner in the firm of Darling & Holmes, mineral water agents at No. 131 State street. Mr. Holmes is also an insurance broker. For the past three Winter season the Holmeses have lived at the aristocratic Beaconsfield, spending their Summers at the beach. Before they went to the Beaconsfield they lived three years at the Charlesgate.

Mrs. Holmes, who is a woman of middle life, is the daughter of a noted organ builder. She has a splendid collection of jewels, which is usually guarded in a manner befitting its worth.

But while the Rockland House was crowded with Sunday traffic a report spread throughout the office, parlors and lobbies that someone had been robbed of jewelry to the value of $2,500. Much secrecy was maintained about the matter, and the employes were cautioned not to say anything about it.

There was much telephoning to the police of Hull, Quincy and Boston, and a general air of mystery and uneasiness permeated the place. Finally it leaked out that the complaint of loss of jewelery was made by someone representing Mrs. Holmes.

A discreet search was undertaken at the hotel, and the officers were on the lookout at the train and steamer terminals and at the South Station, Boston.

Early to-day the police were notified that the jewels "had only been misplaced, and please do not give this out to the papers."

FURNITURE BUYERS THRONG R. H. WHITE'S

Notable August Bargains in House Furnishings Draw Large Crowds.

MANY NEW ATTRACTIONS

Particularly attractive to careful buyers is this week's display of furniture in the notable August sale of the R. H. White Company. This is the third week of the remarkable bargain opportunity and a steadily increasing patronage demonstrates that the people are appreciating the privilege afforded them.

It is no small undertaking to prepare a sale of the magnitude now being conducted by the R. H. White Company. Factories all through the West and South are visited months before the date of the sale and sharp trades driven with idle manufacturers, many times an entire month's output being ordered to keep the wheels of industry turning that would otherwise be still, keeping labor employed and help from scattering, the manufacturer's greatest bugbear. By this means prices are secured that would, under ordinary conditions, be impossible.

Has Buyers on the Spot.

Then there are the sample pieces that the manufacturers make up for their semi annual expositions at Grand Rapids, Chicago and New York. The sharp merchant has his buyers on the spot to snap up these plums as soon as their mission is performed, and the first in the field secures the greatest prizes, often at prices that would be low even for regular goods. By a fortuitous combination of circumstances and good generalship the R. H. White Company are able to offer many thousand dollars' worth of these fine sample pieces and one can be morally certain in buying such pieces that he or she obtains something the duplicate of which does not exist—an exclusive as it were.

Many other rich plums were secured by this company to make their sale more attractive and for the past two weeks the selling of furniture on their mammoth fourth floor has been nothing short of phenomenal.

Big Increase in Bargains.

Now, for this, the third week of the sale, something even more generous in the way of value giving is promised, as reference to the Sunday advertisements will show. New goods are being brought forward as space is gained for their exhibit, and these are priced at the same low figure that has obtained throughout the sale. Many quantities that seemed large at first have now diminished to odd pieces and broken lines and these are summarily dealt with to force them out.

Belated shipments have also arrived that could not be got in readiness before, and all such are handled with scant ceremony as it is no part of the plan of this house to have anything of a special August sale nature left over to mark an increase in stock at the final summing up. Thus it will be easily conjectured that far from there being an abatement of bargains in this third week, there is a notable increase, principally from the causes assigned, but in addition the firm take this opportunity of reducing the prices on much of the furniture that has been found slow in moving—not in such demand as was anticipated at the time of purchase; in other words, some patterns or styles that have proven less popular than others—a thing that could not be determined beforehand.

The company anticipates a greater response this week than at any other time during the sale, and, judging from the numberless attractions contained in its advertisement, this is more than likely to prove to be the case.

DICTATORSHIP IS REFUSED BY NICHOLAS

Perhaps Attempt on His Life Made Grand Duke Favor Linevitch for the Place.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 13.—Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch has declined the dictatorship offered him on August 4, under the title of commander-in-chief of all the troops of the empire where martial law exists.

Whether this was decided before or after the attempt on the life of the grand duke at Krasnoye Selo on August 10 is not known, but the reason given out is that he believes such a post should not be given to a grand duke, but to a purely military man. He favors the appointment of General Linevitch, formerly commander-in-chief of the Manchurian army, but the Emperor has not finally decided the matter.

No Enthusiasm Over Czarevitch.

Yesterday, the second birthday of the czarevitch was observed with the usual display of flags and illuminations, but there was no enthusiasm in the celebration. In fact, few persons seemed to know what was the occasion of the decorations.

The activity of the terrorists in the provinces included, besides the usual harvest of assassinations in Warsaw, an attempt on the life of General Karateff, chief of the gendarmerie of Samara province and the wounding of Captain of Police Ivaroff of Libau by a youth who fired thrice at him in the street.

The assailant of General Karateff mounted the stairs of the general's office and threw a bomb at random. The missile failed to explode. The bomb thrower escaped.

Seven Mutineers Shot.

HELSINGFORS, Aug. 13.—The trial by court martial of the Sveaborg mutineers began Saturday, and Lieutenants Kochanovsky and Emilianoff and five soldiers were at the first sitting found guilty and condemned to death. All were shot and buried in a common grave without ceremony. Kochanovsky's father is a colonel of the guards at St. Petersburg.

RECORD CROWD AT OLD ORCHARD

OLD ORCHARD, Me., Aug. 13.—More excursionists visited this place yesterday than ever before. Over 40,000 persons came, but there was no trouble and but one arrest was made. Every hotel was crowded and cots were set up in every available spot in the hotels, one prominent Massachusetts lawyer even occupying one in the barber shop at one hotel. A liquor raid by Sheriff Athorne of Eliot on several hotels furnished some excitement.

HEAD OF WRECKED BANK A SUICIDE, SON THINKS

Young Stensland Tells of Father's Downfall and Flight from Chicago.

Depositors of Milwaukee Avenue Concern May Get 67 Per Cent. Back.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Theodore Stensland, son of the fugitive president of the looted Milwaukee avenue State bank, to-day revealed the first inside story of his father's downfall and flight from Chicago.

In his remarkable narrative he claims to have told all he knows of the crash.

Young Stensland believes that his father has committed suicide, and also declares that he could not possibly have committed the colossal forgeries that wrecked the West Side Bank.

Depositors of the bank, it is declared by Examiner Jones and Receiver Fetzer, will receive 67 per cent. of their claims. This amount may be increased as Theodore Stensland, it was announced to-day, has turned over to the bank his father's entire personal estate, amounting to more than $850,000, acting under power of attorney sent by the elder Stensland.

Thinks Father a Suicide.

Important disclosures are expected in the bank investigation when the police examine the vaults for two envelopes marked "Concerns Nobody" and "Secret Service," which were among the fugitive banker's papers and were not opened by his son.

In a frank narration of the manner in which the great scandal was made known to him, Stensland not only flatly denied that he ever had knowledge of the plot before August 3, but submitted various proofs with which he expects to substantiate his story when told before a jury. He declares absolutely that he was not only ignorant of the steals perpetrated, but that he never profited in any way from them.

The young man advanced the belief that his father has not fled the country, but has committed suicide. He thinks that his father could not himself have committed the forgeries of notes because of an impediment in his control of the pen in recent years.

HARVARD CREW TIPPED TO BEAT CAMBRIDGE

AMERICAN SYSTEM OF TRAINING SEVERELY CRITICISED BY ENGLISH EXPERTS.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Even at this early date bets are being made as to the outcome of the Harvard and Cambridge eight-oared race. Harvard is made a favorite at odds of 6 to 4, although there is really nothing that justifies the sports making the visiting crew a favorite.

If anything the Cambridge oarsmen are better at the present stage of the game. They are stronger than when they defeated the dark blue of Oxford, while Harvard hasn't had a chance to improve since the Yale race.

In the trials on the Thames, the Cambridge oarsmen have done much cleaner work than the Crimson crew. Their shell cuts through the water more smoothly than their rivals', while the men work together more evenly.

The Harvard men have splendid physique and this quality should count strongly in their favor in a hard finish. On the other hand, the Cambridge men have the advantage in style and experience.

The American system of training is coming in for much criticism. The local critics say that the Americans are too strict in regard to the food that the rowers eat. Moreover, they say that it is wrong to deny the men a moderate use of tobacco.

Yesterday the Harvard and Cambridge oarsmen enjoyed a full day's rest. They paid a visit to the Leander Club at Henley, where they were the guests of Lord Desborough at luncheon.

ARREST VANDERBILT FOR SPEEDING AUTO

YOUNG MILLIONAIRE HAS TO PAY FINE OF $15 IN DEDHAM COURT.

For Harold S. Vanderbilt, Attorney Arthur E. Clark appeared in the Dedham District Court to-day before Associate Judge Plympton and paid a fine of $15 for speeding beyond fifteen miles an hour, Dedham's speed limit for automobiles.

Mr. Vanderbilt was arrested on Saturday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock by Policemen C. A. Smith and Charles Hatch as he was urging his big auto along Washington street in Dedham. He was on his way from Boston to New York. The policemen timed Mr. Vanderbilt, who was alone in his car, and then hurried alongside and ordered him to stop.

Without an effort to escape Mr. Vanderbilt laughingly slowed up and told the officers that he did not know that he was violating the laws of Dedham. He was taken to the station house and Attorney Arthur E. Clark summoned by 'phone. He at once bailed Mr. Vanderbilt out and made all arrangements for the hearing to-day. Then Mr. Vanderbilt bowled along his way toward New York, having been delayed but a half hour.

Mr. Vanderbilt, who is the son of William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., has been visiting at the summer home of his mother, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, in Newport for a few days. It is rumored that he is engaged to marry Miss Eleanora Sears of Boston.

TO SUE ICE MEN FOR NOT FILLING TANKS

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 13.—Retail dealers who have contracts with ice manufacturers for supplies for the present season and who have failed to get the quantity of ice called for in these contracts have declared their intention of suing the manufacturers.

Attorneys say these contracts have been violated and that the dealers have legal redress. These contracts were made before the manufacturers got together and boosted prices.

During the past week, when the cry of famine spread through the city, retail dealers failed to get half the ice claimed under the contract, on the ground that the artificial supply was not sufficient and that the natural product was not obtainable.

6 MATES HER PALLBEARERS

The funeral of five-year-old Mary Rich, who was killed by an electric car on Selby street, East Boston, Saturday afternoon, took place to-day at her home, No. 10 Shelby street. Church service at the Prince Street Church at 2 o'clock follow, and interment is in Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden.

After kissing her mother goodby Saturday afternoon, the little girl went to the store. On her way she dropped five cents and after looking vainly for it returned home for more money. Within sight of the house and before her mother's eyes the little girl walked directly in front of an approaching car. Before the motorman could stop the cars she was crushed beneath the wheels. She died a few minutes after the accident.

At the funeral to-day the pallbearers are six little girl playmates of Mary's, named Florence Vargus, Hannah Whitney, Mary Malino, Elvira Bulduze, Flora Bulduze and Mary Gallo.

"SCOTTY" SAYS WHITE HAD A GUN FOR THAW

"Death Valley" Croesus Declares Architect Planned to Kill Enemy.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 13.—Walter Scott, the Death Valley mystery, is likely to be a star witness for Harry Thaw. "Scotty" last January was the means of preventing Stanford White from killing Thaw in Madison Square Garden, and now has the revolver which White intended to use. He has two witnesses in New York who were present at the time, and saw him take the revolver from White. They heard the controversy and saw the struggle Scott had in wresting the weapon from the infuriated architect.

The story is best told in "Scotty's" own words.

"I cannot say whether it was the night of the Old Guard ball or that of the Liquor Dealers' masquerade, at the Garden last January that the incident happened.

"I was buying wine and was having a squabble with the house about a badly corked bottle, for which I had refused to pay. Then Kessler, the big wine man of New York, came along and, as it was his brand I had said was rotten, he took a hand.

"Just then White came along, and asked me if I was in trouble. I told him nothing but that I could take care of myself. If you can find Kessler he'll remember the affair all right, all right.

"Then White said, 'I thought from the way you talked you were going to kill a man.' I told him I was not looking for any such game as that, and, looking me in the eyes, he said, 'Scotty, I'm going to kill my man to-night. That Thaw and his wife are here and I'm going to get him.'

Blackened Girl's Name.

"You could not even indicate in print the things he said about the Nesbit girl. He coupled her name with a lot of waiters in the Garden.

"Well, I had nothing to do with White's quarrel, and I did not want to see him get into any bad affairs, so I got him into a side room to talk it over.

"I asked him if he had a gun, and he said he had and intended to use it, and he pulled a business looking piece of artillery out of his pocket.

"I grabbed it, and we had quite a little scrap, for I was determined that I would get it away from him before anything happend. There were two men in the room, who sat up and heard what was said. One was named King, a well-known clubman. The other name I'll keep to myself, unless they want the facts in court.

"Those two men are in New York now. I know them and can find them if it is necessary.

Took Gun from White.

Finally I got the gun and White abused me a little, calling me a 'four-flusher' and afraid to stand by a friend under fire, but I let him talk and joshed him back, giving him some advice about how to kill a man in proper shape, and stuck the gun in my pocket.

"The next day the gun was there, and very shortly I was called away, and threw the gun in my grip, intending to send it to White sometime. I forgot all about it until the news of the killing came out in the papers."

WOMAN AND 3 MEN SHOT AT CONEY ISLAND

Two May Die as the Result of a Mysterious Affray.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Four persons, one a woman, were badly wounded in a mysterious shooting affray at Coney Island last night as a result of which two may die.

Just before midnight, when the Bowery was pouring forth its thousands from the numerous show houses the crowd was startled by five pistol shots in rapid succession, followed by a woman's scream.

Everybody rushed to the spot on Ocean avenue, near the Bowery, where George White, twenty-six years old, a waiter living at Twenty-second street and Railroad avenue, Coney Island, was found lying upon the pavment with a pistol wound in his groin and another in his back.

Woman Badly Wounded.

A hundred yards down the avenue lay Miss Anna Smith, a shop girl, of No. 293 Eckford street, Brooklyn. Another pistol bullet had ploughed its way through her right leg, making a dangerous wound.

In their excitement the police missed two other wounded men, who were carried to the reception hospital by their friends. One was Thomas Fitzpatrick, of No. 218 East Fourteenth street, Sheepshead Bay, who was shot in the left side, so near the heart that the wound is probably mortal, and Thomas McDonald, of No. 168 Conner street, Newark, who was wounded less seriously in the side.

White and Miss Smith were also rushed to the hospital, where White's wound, it was said, might prove fatal.

On the pavement near the spot where White was found the police picked up a thirty-eight-calibre revolver, fully loaded.

Two Engaged in Duel.

Nothing further was discovered that would help to solve the mystery. The police believe White and another man were fighting a duel, and that the other three were struck by accident. White refused to talk.

Miss Smith said she knew nothing except that while walking along the avenue she had been shot.

TERRIBLE ECZEMA ON LITTLE BOY

Mouth and Eyes Covered With Crusts—Face Itched Most Fearfully—Hands Pinned Down to Prevent Scratching

MIRACULOUS CURE BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

ALFONSO HOHRATH.

"When my little boy was six months old, he had eczema. The sores extended so quickly over the whole body that we at once called in the doctor. We then went to another doctor, but he could not help him, and in our despair we went to a third one. Matters became so bad that he had regular holes in his cheeks, large enough to put a finger into. The food had to be given with a spoon, for his mouth was covered with crusts as thick as a finger, and whenever he opened the mouth they began to bleed and suppurate, as did also his eyes. Hands, arms, chest, and back, in short the whole body, was covered over and over. We had no rest by day or night. Whenever he was laid in his bed, we had to pin his hands down; otherwise he would scratch his face, and make an open sore. I think his face must have itched most fearfully.

"We finally thought nothing could help, and I had made up my mind to send my wife with the child to Europe, hoping that the sea air might cure him, otherwise he was to be put under good medical care there. But, Lord be blessed, matters came differently, and we soon saw a miracle. A friend of ours spoke about Cuticura. We made a trial with Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent, and within ten days or two weeks we noticed a decided improvement. Just as quickly as the sickness had appeared it also began to disappear, and within ten weeks the child was absolutely well, and his skin was smooth and white as never before." F. Hohrath, President of the C. L. Hohrath Company, Manufacturers of Silk Ribbons, 4 to 20 Rink Alley, South Bethlehem, Pa. June 5, 1905.

WOMAN FIGHTS TO SEE PRESIDENT IN CHURCH

CALLS LONGWORTH BY NICKNAMES; ROUGHLY HANDLED BY SECRET SERVICE MEN.

OYSTER BAY, Aug. 13.—Twice during the service at Christ's Episcopal Church yesterday a woman, Miss Elizabeth Case, attempted to talk with President Roosevelt from a pew she occupied close by the executive and his family. The incident created considerable commotion. Failing in this, having each time been removed by the ushers, she waited until the close of the service and then called to the President while the secret service men tried to hustle her out of the edifice. From the handling of the secret service men and the ushers Miss Case, or Esae, as she calls herself, was necessarily roughly used. Her watch chain was broken and her dress and hair torn and rumpled. She was not arrested. She has several times tried to see Mrs. Roosevelt on a mysterious mission.

"Mr. President! Mr. President! President Roosevelt!" she cried loudly as the President was leaving the church. "Won't you speak to me a moment?"

The President turned his head quickly at the sound of the woman's cry, but made no answer and passed on. Behind the President came Mrs. Longworth, Mrs. Roosevelt, Quentin and Mr. Longworth. Miss Esae, surrounded by the secret service men, had no chance to speak to the first three, but as the guard closed in after Mrs. Roosevelt she reached the edge of the aisle in time to catch Mr. Longworth. She called to him several time, addressing him by all his names, nicknames and titles, but Mr. Longworth hurried on.

Outside the church Miss Esae struggled hard to reach the President's carriage. The secret service men interposed their broad backs and wedged the woman in an angle of the church wall.

Miss Esae had no complaint to make against the secret service men, but turned all her anger against James Duffey, the usher, who she declared had torn her dress. She said she thought that she had been used spitefully, and that she believed that she was acting within her rights in attempting to speak to the President.

"I have worn out one pair of shoes, and my dress is dropping from my back," said she, "but I mean to stay here until I see either Mrs. Roosevelt or the President."

When Detective Connell took Miss Esae's hand in an attempt to quiet her during the service she put her hand over his, saying: "I don't like the sin, but I do like the sinner."

POPE PLANS REVIVAL FOR ANNIVERSARY

World-Wide Religious Activity to Mark Jubilee Year.

ATTACK ON MATERIALISM

ROME, Aug. 13.—The fiftieth anniversary of the ordination of Pope Pius to the priesthood, which occurs next year, is to be made a universal jubilee, it is rumored at the Vatican. It is understood that the Pope, in proclaiming this jubilee, will declare that he wishes it to be made the occasion of a world wide religious revival.

Catholics will be urged, in a special encyclical letter, to organize pilgrimages to Rome. A course of missions will be arranged in every parish in the world, at which eloquent priests will exhort the people to lead higher spiritual lives. Such jubilees heretofore have usually been celebrated only with elaborate ceremonies. Pius X. wants something different to commemorate his entrance into the priesthood. This desire is in line with his whole policy since he entered the Vatican. He has constantly opposed extremes in ceremonial, and has encouraged instead every effort for the spiritual elevation of the people everywhere.

It is an open secret that the Pope hopes the world wide revival that he plans will not only benefit Catholics religiously, but will in some measure act as a check upon what he conceives to be the growing materialism of the times and a general drift toward agnosticism and socialism.

The mayors of Attiano and Sanguiseppi also delivered into my custody for presentation to the chairman of the relief committee, upon arrival in New York, a beautiful cameo portrait of Mr. Hearst, framed in pearls and executed by the famous Neapolitan sculptor, Stella.

Accompanying the portrait are engrossed resolutions from the municipal authorities of the Vesuvius towns, thanking Chairman Hearst.

'WILD BILL' IS HOST TO GUESTS OF AMERICAN

Coupon Holders See Pictures of Real Ranch Life at Wonderland.

DOUBLE TREAT FOR 2 DAYS

"Wild Bill" is keeping open house to-day and to-morrow for BOSTON AMERICAN guests at Wonderland.

To-day begins the best week yet at Wonderland for the holders of BOSTON AMERICAN coupons. Hitherto the coupons printed in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN have merely admitted to the big pleasure resort. Yesterday the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN printed two coupons, one good for admission to Wonderland, the other good for admission to the big "Wild West." This double offer is bringing crowds of pecople to Wonderland to-day.

The coupons are good to-day or to-morrow, afternoon or evening. If you can't go to-day, go to-morrow.

Picture of Ranch Life.

"Wild Bill," who is mentioned as the entertainer of BOSTON AMERICAN guests to-day, is the famous owner and proprietor of the "Wild West." He has gathered together in his big arena a splendid collection of rough riders, cowboys, cowgirls, Indians, expert sharpshooters, lariat throwers and cattle rustlers, brought here right from the West. His show is simply a lively bit of ranch life transplanted without a change into this effete East.

It is one of the best shows in all Wonderland. It is expensive to "stage," as they say, the programme is long enough to please without being tiresome, and the various "turns" are as diverse as one can imagine.

The keynote of the "Wild West" is action. There are dashing rides by the cowboys, cowgirls and Indians. The latter give their weird aboriginal dances. The cowboys illustrate how they settle with horse thieves in the West. They show the audience how bucking bronchos are ridden on the plains. Every phase of frontier life is depicted with a realism that takes the breath away from the staid Easterner. It is realism because it is the real, real thing.

Perilous Walk on Wire.

The admission to Wonderland alone is considerable of a treat. Fred A. Bene-Bennett, manager of the open-air shows, has a new attraction this week in the person of James E. Hardy, the "Hero of Niagara." Hardy is a tight-rope walker. A rope is stretched from the tower of the Beautiful Orient to the Administration building, crossing the courses of the lagoon and directly over the board walk. This rope is 100 feet high. On this perilous perch Hardy walks with more confidence than most people display on an ordinary sidewalk.

Leader Jean Missud of the Salem Cadet Band, which plays in the open air, is arranging new and varied concert programmes for every afternoon and evening.

The grand parade of nations, which is a daily feature of Wonderland, is free to you, once you are inside the place. In this parade the new West and the old, old East come together in startling contrast. The wiry little horses of the cowboys, the stately camels of the "Beautiful Orient," the big, sturdy fire horses of the "Fire and Flames" make another contrast, typical of the diversity of this parade.

The electrical illumination at night, when Wonderland is aglow with thousands of incandescent lights arranged in all sorts of decorative lines and groups, is another sight free to all, of course, but none the less splendid on that account.

If you wish to have a good time free of cost, cut out the Wonderland and Wild West coupons from the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN and use them to-day or to-morrow.

NEWS OF LABOR.

The Labor Day parade this year will be the twentieth in this city and will mark the twentieth anniversary of the holiday in this State. It is agreed that the parade this year will be the largest on record, and leaders of the plans declare that 25,000 men will be in line. The route of the parade will be the same as that of last year.

Many organizations which will parade this year have not been seen in the line for several years.

The Carpenters' District Council is taking a referendum vote on all thirty-four unions of the district parading, and the Painters' District Council of eastern Massachusetts has voted that all its affiliated unions parade together in this city.

The parade, as at present being arranged, is to be a joint turn out of the Central Labor Union, the new building trades section of the C. L. U., and District Assembly 30, K. of L., original, that of the longshoremen, freight handlers and transportation interests assemblies.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM.

Plans for the legislative program to be followed next year were discussed yesterday at the meeting of the State Executive Board of Engineers' Union, and several matters desired by the engineers will be put into form and presented to the legislature by petition. At an executive session of the Building Trades Council last night it was decided to invite Governor Guild and Mayor Fitzgerald to view the Building Trades Council in the Labor Day parade. The Labor Day committee reported its arrangements for the parade.

HARVARD'S SONS MOURN "JOHN THE ORANGEMAN"

Quaint Character at University for Half a Century Dies At Hospital As Result of Operation.

John the Orangeman is dead. He died early yesterday at the Massachusetts General Hospital after an operation, Thursday, for cancer. And Harvard College mourns its best-known character, who for over fifty years supplied the students with fruit, sweet chocolate and popcorn.

John Lovett—for that was his real name—had a speaking acquaintance with more Harvard men than any man connected with the institution, and so far as is known, never made an enemy. If every Harvard man who came to love the honest old man were to bring a blossom to his bier "he would sleep to-night beneath a wilderness of flowers."

John, the Optimist.

No more hopeful optimist ever lived. In Harvard's darkest athletic days John could always see victory, for the men on the team were "foine byes," and so to his mind couldn't lose. And when defeat came the old mascot would say, "Well, fren, they'll do it nex' time."

Like one of the Crimson's well known football coaches, John thought that Harvard existed for the sole purpose of beating Yale. One day when asked what the "Veritas" on the Harvard seal meant, the old man replied, "To h—— with Yale."

The great day of the year for John was commencement day. Early in the morning he would take his stand in the yard with his old donkey and cart, and until evening he would hold one continuous reception. Everybody knew him, and he remembered everybody. Men in all stations of life would drop out of the sombre and dignified commencement procession to shake him by the hand once more, and one more laugh over that prank of undergraduate days.

His Donkey and Cart.

His little donkey and cart have become inseparably associated with John in his years of infirmity. The old man and the donkey had a perfect understanding. Every morning in Spring they could be found in front of Hollis Hall, where John would sit on the steps, and the donkey, "Annex Radcliffe," sun herself out on the driveway.

Points in Career of John the Orangeman

Sold fruit and sweets to students for over fifty years.

Was looked to as college mascot.

Had remarkable memory of names of graduates.

Had sublime faith in Harvard and all of the faculty and students.

His donkey and push cart, gifts of students some years ago, gained fame with their owner.

He was a close friend of President Roosevelt.

He was born in Ireland and eighty-one years old.

John was born in the little village of Kenmere, County Kerry, Ireland. With a little red trunk on his shoulder and the remainder of his secular possessions in a very red handkerchief, hanging from the end of a shillalah of real blackthorn, the wandering one of twelve children, landed in America when he was about eighteen, and proceeded to Cambridge, where he had ever since remained.

John was married to Mary Hallissey in the early 60's, and to them were born four children. Of this family his daughter Katherine, who lived with John on Beaver street until his end, survives him. Mrs. Lovett died several years ago, and with her death, John lost his interest in affairs.

60 DAYS have elapsed since the BOSTON AMERICAN filed with the Attorney-General a formal information and petition that he bring suit to force the New York, Haven & Hartford Railroad and the Boston & Albany Railroad to obey the law and to abandon the competing trolley lines which they have illegally acquired.

Why does the Attorney-General delay?

JAG ON A WATER WAGON; PHEW! WHAT STUNTS!

Malden Dust Layer on Wild Sunday Jaunt Has a Vision of Thirstless Town.

COULDN'T STEER CHARIOT

Can a man be "on the water wagon" and be enjoying a glorious "jag" at the same ime?

He can.

Jeremiah Sweeney of Malden can do it.

Jeremiah drives one of the water wagons of the city. Yesterday, while the citizens and citizenesses were going to church, arrayed in the best they had, Jeremiah did is circus stunt.

Perhaps it was because his cart was numbered 13, and because he wanted to get ahead of the August Hoodoo Day to-day, he had mistaken himself for the tank, and had also made a mistake in the wetting-down fluid he put into it. Anyway, he was full before the cart was, and by the time that was full he didn't know it.

His eyes took on the properties of a wide-angle lens. The dusty street extended clear up on each side to the foundations of the houses along Mountain avenue. With noisy hilarity Jeremiah urged his horses upon the sidewalk. He didn't care if there were half a dozen elderly ladies in their Sunday finery there. He gave them a good wetting.

"'Tis a sin to be dry when the water's free," he cried to them as they reviled him.

Then he carromed to the other side of the street and up on the lawn of a mansion, then along the sidewalk and out into the street, leaving a flood behind him, and all the while yelling like a Comanche Indian on the warpath.

Then he fell asleep and dreamed that he was driving a chariot with nine white horses toward a brilliantly lighted city, above which, in letters of gold, were the words: "All Drinks Free."

Just as his chariot came to the gates of his attractive metropolis Jerry was awakened by a resounding punch. It was from a policeman. The water in his cart had dripped all away, the street was a big puddle, and Jerry was mad. His dream hadn't come true.

MILE A MINUTE TO SAVE LIFE OF ENGINEER

Remarkable Run of Locomotive From Readville to Boston With Unconscious Man.

With the engineer, who a few moments before had held the throttle driving his locomotive over the tracks of the Midland division of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, in a dying condition suffering from concussion of the brain, his engine was driven from Readville to Boston early to-day at the rate of a mile a minute, covering the distance of ten miles in a little over ten minutes.

While his train was waiting in Readville, Engineer J. F. Bunny, forty years old, of Norwood, fell from the high railroad bridge that crosses the street. Train employes who ran to his assistance found that he was seriously injured, and no time was lost in making preparations for a record run to this city. A train dispatcher ordered a clear track; the unconscious engineer was placed in the cab and all the power of the mighty locomotive was called upon for speed.

At the South station an ambulance from the Lagrange street station was waiting and in less than fifteen minutes after the start from Readville Bunny was on the operating table at the Massachusetts General Hospital. It was found that beside multiple bruises and contusions he was suffering from concussion of the brain. Bunny is not expected to live. He is married and has been in the service many years.

WAGE-EARNERS' CLUBS GATHER IN HUB TO-DAY

Politics Among Features to Be Discussed at First Convention To-morrow.

GOMPERS AMONG SPEAKERS

Delegates and those actively interested in the cause of the wage earners are to-day gathering in Boston to attend the first general convention of the Massachusetts State Wage Earners' Clubs, which is to open in the Wells Memorial Building to-morrow at 10 o'clock. Before nightfall it is expected that the majority of the delegates who are to represent their various clubs from all over the State will be here.

Dennis D. Driscoll, a member of the Executive Committee of the Wage Earners' Central Club of Boston, is active in the work of receiving the incoming delegations. With the other members of the Central Club of Boston the visitors are being made to feel at home and plans are completed for the preliminary work of a convention which is expected to mark an epoch in the industrial and political history of this State.

To Enter Field of Politics.

All of the Wage Earners' Clubs in Massachusetts have been heard from and there is no doubt that all will be represented at the convention. A platform and constitution for the government of the State body is to be adopted.

As this convention marks the first formal entry of labor, organized labor as such, into politics and the affairs of state, there will probably be a general discussion as to what candidates for State office shall be endorsed. The discussion will take wide and general scope, and it will likely include the consideration of taking the field in opposition to candidates known to be unfriendly to the demands of labor.

Gompers to Speak.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is expected to be present. He will probably arrive here to-night. With him are likely to be Thomas Tracy of the American Federation's executive board, and probably others high in power in the American Federation. President Gompers is on the program for the principal speech in the convention. Other prominent men who are in sympathy with the movement will also make addresses.

E. Gerry Brown of Brockton, chairman of the general committee of fifteen, will preside.

DOESN'T SEE TRAIN THAT IS IN PLAIN SIGHT

Conductor Gives Summer People a Scare; Express Had Passed Him.

PALMER, Aug. 13.—Because Conductor Fairfield of the south-bound Central Vermont train, which makes close connection with the Block Island boat at New London, failed to see the big east-bound New York Central express at the station here, western Massachusetts, Vermont and New Hampshire families who are living at Block Island during the Summer came near being deprived of the society of husbands, brothers and sweethearts over Sunday.

Fairfield's train was waiting patiently at the Palmer station Saturday afternoon for the east-bound express. The minutes dragged by and the masculine contingent from Worcester County, the Berkshires and Green Mountain State began to grumble, fearing they would miss the Block Island boat.

Fifteen minutes passed, and ex-Alderman William Tapley, of Springfield, ventured the query: "What are we waiting for, Fairfield?"

"Passengers from the east-bound express," responded Conductor Fairfield affably.

"But the express has been gone a quarter of an hour," said the ex-alderman.

Conductor Fairfield dashed into the train dispatcher's office and verified the information. While the belated train was pounding the rails to New London Conductor Fairfield scratched his head in an effort to account for the ability of the heavy New York Central express to arrive and depart under his very eyes without his knowledge.

HOLY GHOSTERS LEAVE ON SHIP

Unable to stand the notoriety given them as they were anchored in Boston harbor, the "Holy Ghost and Us" society sailed away early Sunday morning, presumably for Freeport, Me. Their old barkentine, Rebeca Crowell, looked very pretty as she proceeded northward in the direction of Freeport, Me., under full sail.

LIVE WIRE IS DEATH TO MAN

Hurled over forty feet from the place where he was standing when he took hold of a live wire dangling from a pole, Henry Furdon, a policeman of only two months, was instantly killed on Washington street, Newton, last evening. It was a telephone wire and had become charged with 2,000 volts of electricity by being crossed with the city light wires.

A crowd gathered around the stricken man, but no one dared touch the body. An electrician was summoned and took care of the wire. A physician examined the body and declared that death came instantly.

HELD UP, BUT SAVES DIAMONDS

With his gold headed cane, Joseph Gebbard, a New York jewelry drummer, put three footpads out of business, who attacked him on Portland street last night while on his way to North Station to take the 10 o'clock train for Portland.

The rascals tried to snatch a traveling bag containing many hundred dollars worth of jewelry and diamonds from Mr. Gebbard and used him roughly in the attempt, but the vigor with which he belabored their heads with his cane put them to flight.

GAMES YESTERDAY.

No games played.

GAMES SCHEDULED TO-DAY.

Chicago at Brooklyn.
Pittsburg at New York.
Cincinnati at Philadelphia.

The Nationals left here this morning for Pittsburg where they are scheduled to play a series of four games with the Pirates. If there is one team in the league that the Columbus avenue nine would rather not meet at present it is Fed Clarke's tribe.

Gene Goode was corralled yesterday by Tenney and will be hurried west with the team. Al Strobel's injury, which was caused by Grady's interference on Saturday will probably keep the former out of the game for some time to come. His physician had pronounced it a case of water on the knee and it would not be surpising if the little second baseman was kept out of the game for the rest of the season.

After winning a double-header Saturday and for the past two weeks puting up the best form so far this season, the league footers hardly view the next four days with satisfaction.

Yesterday, as sort of a relish, the Tenney tribe journeyed to Providence and gave the Roger Williams team a game.

Tenney had a new pitcher, Johnson, in the box and gave him a thorough try-out. The new man pitched a fairly good game and fielded his position well. It is probable that he will stay a while with the Bostons.

Cronin was too full of curves for the major portion of the visiting team to get onto. He had a slew of underhand spit balls and some speedy ones that completely fazed the big leaguers. Boston's one run came in the fourth.

FITZ'S EATING DREW CROWD AT CONEY

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Bob Fitzsimmons sat on the porch of the Albemarle Hotel, in Surf avenue, Coney Island, yesterday afternoon, assimilating a seven pound club steak, four ounces to the mouthful. Former Alderman Barker sat by and cheered him on.

At least four thousand persons in the avenue blocked the crowded way to help Alderman Barker. The ballyhoo in front of Bostock's took in the situation and shouted to regather the attention of his constituents.

"Across the way!" he bawled through his megaphone; "across the way you see the waiter feeding the animals; throwing meat to the fiery, untamed Australian kangaroo. There you see him. Hear him growl! Now he is finished, but inside this arena they have just begun to feed the royal Bengal ti-gers. This way, ladies and gentlemen."

But it didn't feaze the Australian Kangaroo. He surrounded the steak, and then went over to Bostock's himself. Not to see them feed the royal Bengal tigers, but to sell to Bostock his own lion, which Fitz abstracted last season. It has been a lovely pet until lately, when it developed an abnormal appetite for flesh meat and became the terror of the Fitzsimmons household.

"Bloomin' blighter!" said Bob, yesterday. "'E's heatin' me out o' 'ouse and 'ome."

SHERWOOD WON AMATEUR CUPS

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—C. A. Sherwood, captain of the New York Athletic Club's cycle racing team, won both of the amateur events at the Vailsburg track in Newark yesterday. His teammate, George C. Cameron, gave him a hard fight in the flying start quarter-mile event, but Sherwood won by a length and a half, Mackay pressing Cameron very closely.

DIXIE WON MOTOR RACE

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 13.—A match race between the motor boats Glen, owned by J. H. Hoadley of New York, and the Dixie, owned by Edward J. Schroeder of Jersey City, was held here yesterday, the Dixie winning after the Glen had retired from the contest on account of a cracked cylinder. The race was for the Newport cup, which is to be offered annually for the event.

The distance was thirteen miles and was made in 23 minutes 16 1-5 seconds.

GANS, REAL CHAMPION, GETS THE SMALL END

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 13.—It is all settled now that Nelson and Gans are to box at Goldfield on Labor Day, Sept. 3. There was a deadlock for a while, owing to Nelson asking for seventy-five per cent of the $30,000 purse, whether he lost or won. Finally Nolan agreed to accept $20,000 and articles were signed.

There is to be no winner's and loser's end. Each man knows now before beginning to train how much he is to receive.

Nolan says there have been numbers of instances in which champions have drawn down the long end of the purse, though defeated. He forgets that ring historians pronounce Gans the real champion of the class that Nelson belongs in, but that's neither here nor there.

Nelson is the drawing card in this particular case and that is what places his managers in a position to demand inordinate concessions.

There certainly have been instances where a defeated champion had received more than his conquerer—the Fitzsimmons-Jeffries fight at Coney Island for one—but the facts did not leak out until long after the contest. This thing of looking the whole world squarely in the eye and making a demand for the hog's share of the plunder, win or lose, is brazen faced, to say the least, and will hasten the destruction of the few ideals that are left in connection with the prize ring.

It stands to reason that where each principal is to receive a stated sum for his services, "win or lose," there is no incentive to endure more fatigue or buffeting than the law allows.

The records of the ring are sprinkled with instances of pugilists who, with battered ribs and bruised faces, gritted their teeth and fought on and on and on in the hope of earning the long end of the purse and lifting the mortgage on the farm.

In this case, though, the long end of the purse does not hang in the balance. All mortgages are provided for before the starting bell tinkles, and such being the case there is ample reason for speculation as to what effect the cut and dried apportionment of the plunder will have on the fighters.

Say, for instance, that Battling Nelson is being severely punished may not the thought occured to him as he sniffs a moment between rounds.

"What am I putting up with all this for? I am to get the long end of that purse anyhow, and they won't pay me any more if I stand here to be hammered to shreds. Guess I'll take a little nap in the next round."

The same line of reasoning may occur to Gans if he happens to be getting the worst of the milling and then again the rivalry between the men may be such as to make them forget all sordid considerations and battle like demons while strength remains.

The only thing is this: Where one man demands a bigger slice of the prize money before the fight it is but natural to suppose that he has doubts as to his ability to win the long end of the purse in a legitimate, sportsmanlike manner, and where a "drawing card" shows by his tactics he is a victim of doubt there is every reason why the public should remain in doubt as to the outcome of the whole affair.

Harry Baker's victory over Frankie Neil at Los Angeles was one of the surprises for which the pugilistic game is famous.

Baker has long been known as a shifty, speedy glove man, but few supposed he had it in him to lower Neil's colors.

Of course the Neils questioned the fairness of Referee Tom Burns's ruling, but it is ever thus when the defeated man has any fight left in him at the close of a limited bout.

It makes no difference to him that his face looks like a paper target after a German shoot, while his opponent is as fresh and smooth as though just turned out of a barber's chair. He has been "robbed" and that's all there is to it.

Baker's leap into prominence reminds us that San Francisco's new crop of boxers is becoming quite an imposing battle line, overlapping every class from bantam to heavy. In addition to Baker there are Dick Hyland, Bob Lundie, Joe Thomas, Al Kaufmann and Sam Berger, quite a formidable bunch of "spring chickens."

We ought surely to land one world's champion out of the lot.

The muddle in the Gans-Nelson fight had its effect on the boxing situation generally. There was no telling what an hour would bring forth, and San Francisco promoters just held aloof from match making entirely. No doubt they hoped against hope that the Nelson-Gans plum might fall to them after all.

As matters stand it is believed that Jimmy Britt and Eddie Hanlon will be signed for the opening card on September 10. Then again they may not. The friction in the fight trust which it was thought had disappeared in the flames which devoured San Francisco, is still in evidence and the old game of cross-purposes may begin again with Graney and Levy at one end of the saw and Coffroth and Willus Britt at the other.

If Britt and Hanlon are matched there will be considerable interest in the affair. It is a case of two native sons who have been rivals for a long time and who can each boast a large following.

LEWIS P. SPEARE MAY BE NEXT A. A. A. PRESIDENT

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Although the annual election of the American Automobile Association, is several months away, talk regarding a new head is already being heard. During the recent tour the matter was discussed pro and con to a considerable degree, and there was a decided inclination to secure, if possible, for the presidency of the association some man who will be active, and give his time and energy to the organization. The name of Lewis R. Speare, president of the Bay State Automobile Association was mentioned more than once, and the chance of his being elected for the presidency are decidely good. His promotion would be a logical conclusion, as he is to-day one of the vice-presidents of the organization. It was pointed out that since the election last January Mr. Speare has presided at every meeting of the A. A. A., and taht alone entitles him to consideration. Further than that Mr. Speare has repeadely shown ambition and willingness to do everything in his power for the advancement of motoring.

Take, for instance, his work in the Bay State Automobile Association. Through his efforts and those of his fellows on the board of directors of that club, it has been made one of the strongest and most influential motor associations in the country. It has ever been active in the world of motoring, instead of being wrapped up in itself, as is too often the case with automobile clubs. He has been at the head of the B. S. A. A. since its inception, and if he so desires may retain the presidency another year, as there is no one man in the club who as yet aspires to that position.

So far as the A. A. A. is concerned Mr. Speare would make an admirable presiding officer; one who would give freely of his time and energy. The West has the office this year. President Farson has done well to a degree. The East wants the head of the organization another year, and unless all signs fail the man to be honored with that position will be Lewis R. Speare. Active to a degree, enterprising and aggressive, not alone in the advancement of tours and racing, but likewise in his efforts to secure fair and equitable speed laws, Mr Speare would make the right man for the position.

Of course the men of Massachusetts would support him were he to go into the arena for the position. So would the greater portion of the New Yorkers. Mr Speare will not enter a contest for any position either in the local or national body. In a recent conversation he said: "I should be pleased to receive the nomination and election, but as for entering into a fight for any office, that I would not do. I am interested in motoring simply and solely for pleasure, and when goes into a political campaign, for such it can be called, he forget pleasure and makes a business fight, losese friends and makes his life uncomfortable. That portion of the sport has no attraction for me."

A new car for Bostonians, and one which is attracting no end of attention, is the 1907 model of the Cartercar, a two-cylinder friction drive machine, that gives promise of exceeding in speed and ability all other cars of this type. This car is a powerful little thing and full of speed, as shown by the fact that on Wednesday last two policemen of the Brighton district took oath to the fact that they timed the car going up hill carrying five persons at the rate of thirty miles an hour.

Mr. E. P. Blake, who has secured the New England agency for the car, paid the court $15 to learn this interesting fact, and he is fully satisfied with the testimony offered. In the car can carry five going up hill and travel at that speed he is interesting in knowing what she will do on the flat. In appearance the car is neat and atrractive, being shown in both the touring and runabout styles. This car differs from most friction drive cars inasmuch as the friction disc is moved by either foot clutch or hand lever to and from the driving wheel, instead of vice versa.

PILGRIMS ARE A BIT WEAKER

The Boston Americans had a profitable week in point of games won, registering four victories out of the six games played, notwithstanding a general falling off in individual batting. Grimshaw returned to his old position and showed that he has not altogether lost his batting eye, by hammering out a safety in all but one of the five games he played. Winter got back to the game and added forty-nine points to his batting mark. Hayden and Freeman were small gainers on the week's work. The losses were: Grimshaw and Stahl, each three points; Hoey eleven, Tannehill, Parent and Morgan, three each, Peterson nine, Young ten. Armbruster two, Harris five, Dinneen six points.

NATIONALS DO NOT IMPROVE

The Boston Nationals had a very disastrous week, but by concentrating all their efforts upon the last day managed to pull two games out of the fire, having lost the other six. The batting was, as usual, light and spasmodic, Bates, who has been the team's premier batsman most of the season, fell away thirteen points, and surrenders the honor to Tenney, who made a gain of one point. Howard holds up to his ordinary mark, but Brain wreaked vengeance upon the ball, hitting safely in every game but one, garnering altogether eleven hits for the week, and boosting his average along twelve points. Needham also worked out a grudge against the ball, jumping his mark along twenty-six points. Brown's re-entry into the game was signalized by an addition of seven points to his average. Bates and Bridwell dropped thirteen points each, Strobel six and Dolan eight.

HEALY MADE RECORD.

HAMBURG, Aug. 13.—Cecil Healy, the amateur champion swimmer of Australia, won the 100-meter swimming championship and the Emperor's cup, creating a new German record for the distance of one minute seven seconds.

FINE BREEZE FOR FIRST ROOSEVELT CUP TRIAL

MARBLEHEAD, Aug. 13.—A rattling fine breeze blew this morning for the first trial race for the honor of defending the Roosevelt Cup, a trophy given for the purpose of encouraging international small boat racing, and in quest of which two German-built yachts already have arrived in this country, under the auspices of the Eastern Yacht Club, the donor of the cup. At the conclusion the German-American Race Committee of the club will select the three American defenders to sail against the German yachts in September.

Seventeen yachts were entered for the trials. Of these, eight represent the Eastern Yacht Club, two, the Corinthian Yacht Club of Marblehead; three, the Boston Yacht Club, and one each the Hingham, Quincy, Manchester, Southern of New Orleans and New York Yacht Clubs. The yachts have all been built under certain restructions as to dimensions and sail area and constitute a special section of what is known in Germany as a "Sonder" class.

Under the agreement between the Eastern Yacht Club and the Imperial Yacht Club of Kiel, Germany, none of the yachts weighs less than 4,035 pounds, and the sail area is not over 550 square feet. The American yachts have all been built in this country from American designs and will be handled by American-born skippers and crews.

All but three of the yachts have done more or less racing in the way of tuning up for the past two months and several have shown themselves to be very speedy. Of the yachts that have raced, the Sally VIII. owned by L. F. Percival, of the Corinthian Club; the Sumatra, owned by Francis Skinner of the Eastern Yacht Club; the Manchester II., owned by J. L. Bremer, of the Manchester Yacht Club, and the Bonedrel, owned by G. H. Wightman, of the Hingham Club, have done the best work.

The trial races will all be held off the entrance of Salem Bay, the start being at Halfway Rock, an isolated rock three miles off shore, and about half way between Boston and Cape Ann. The regatta committee has laid out two courses, one of twelve miles for windward and leeward legs, and the second a fifteen mile triangular course, of five miles to each side. Ten yachts will be started as near 11 o'clock in the forenoon as possible, and there will be no time allowance.

A meeting of the regatta committee was held to make final arrangements for the races. The committee announced after the meeting that two of the yachts which had entered would not compete. They are the Hayseed I. and the Moslem II. A time limit of six hours was arranged for the contest.

At a meeting of the captains of the competing yachts a number of them signed an agreement not to haul out their boats for cleaning during the trials. Nearly all the seventeen competitors were in the harbor last night. With their owners and clubs they are as follows:

Yacht and Owner.	Clubs.

TARS TO SEE GLOUCESTER BOUT

As far as the boxing interest of this city goes this week the big bout will be held at Gloucester. On Thursday Albert Delmont will meet Kid Ketzenberger of the battleship Maine. Ketzenberger is champion featherweight of the navy. The sailors of the North Atlantic squadron, which is now off Rockeport, are very much interested in the battle, and so are the officers of the fleet. There will be a big crowd of sailors at the bout and the club will have to build an addition to get everybody in. Delmont feels very confident of winning, while his friends think that the bout will be a joke for the little North Ender.

Attell Too Fast for Carsey!

At Grand Rapids, also on Wednesday night, Frank Carsey of Chicago, is to meet the clever Abe Attell. Carsey is a good boxer, but on form he does not appear to have a look-in against such a wonderfully fast boxer as Attell certainly is.

The meting of Neary and Herrera in Milwaukee, scheduled for Friday night, is the contest of the week in which the fans are most interested. Ever since Neary boxed here the sports have picked him as the one who was likely to beat Nelson, and in his coming battle against the Mexican they expect to get a better line on him.

Already Met Four Times.

The pair have already met four times. In three of these battles the decision was a draw and the fourth was stopped by the police after one round had been fought. Their bout on Friday night is limited to eight rounds, but as they have improved considerably since their last meeting, there is little doubt but what the sports will be able to judge who is the better fighter. Both are hard punchers and very clever.

Hock Keyes, the Australian, and Dick Hyland of California, who are to meet in Ogden, Utah, on Friday night, will put up a good bout. Keyes is very clever, but not a hard hitter. There is nothing showy about Hyland's style of boxing. He fights after the style of Nelson, and has a good punch with either hand. He is thought well of by the western sports, but he developed a bad case of cold feet before he gave the fans hereabouts a chance to see him in action. Keyes is on his way back to his home in the antipodes, and stopped off at the Mormon city to get a little more good American money before leaving. Hyland is picked to beat the Australian.

Deshler and Matty May Meet.

It is more than likely that Dave Deshler and "Matty" Baldwin will be on the card at the Lincoln Club, August 21. Both have agreed to weigh 130 pounds at 3 o'clock, but Johnny Mack, who is supposed to be Baldwin's manager, wants the weight made 133 pounds, ringside. Baldwin claims that Mack is no longer his manager. Differences that have prevented the clinching of the match before now will be settled by this morning. It will be a good bout and will attract a big crowd. Deshler has had a good rest and is now in good shape.

QUAKERS WILL PLAY CRICKET IN ENGLAND

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 13.—Plans are bing laid out to boom cricket at the University of Pennsylvania next year, the big feature of the season to be the sending of a team to England, patterning the trip on the style of the many successful ventures carried out by the Haverford College eleven.

With this object in view, the cricket committee is making an earnest plea among the cricketing alumni for financial aid in promoting interest in the sport and furthering the reputation of the University of Pennsylvania at home and abroad.

The proposed tour in England in 1907 would include twelve to fourteen two-day games, and besides meeting the stronger schools, such as Eton, Harrow, Cheltenham and Winchester, it is hoped to conclude the trip with games against the two university teams, Oxford and Cambridge.

All of this year's team will return to college in the fall, and the eleven will be further strengthened by some three or four excellent players who enter college this year. Seven of the team have already played against English teams upon the Philadelphia Colts. The team, is, therefore, one of considerable experience and should make a good record for itself.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 13.—The unique ins and outs of baseball are being illustrated once more in the peculiar freak of fate by which Catcher Tom Doran is appearing once more in a Boston uniform. Two seasons ago Doran was one of Boston's catchers.

In weeding out his superfluous talent, as well as in an effort to strengthen the Detroit club, which was then in a bad way for catchers, Collins released Doran for the nominal sum of $1,000 to the Tigers. Tom was a disappointment and Detroit this Spring shifted him to Toronto. Barrow released him, and he had just returned to the city and was preparing to accept an offer from the Altoona club of the Tri State League when Boston happened along.

Collins picked Doran up at the hotel after Armbruster had been hurt, and Doran's presence on the bench allowed the Boston manager to bench Peterson in Saturday's thirteen-inning contest and send Freeman to the bat.

"Buck" contributed the hit that won the game. Doran caught the rest of the contest and all the next one, and now he bids fair to become once more a member of the Boston club.

Strict adherence to training rules would make a grand catcher out of Doran, beyond a doubt, and he realizes now that, if signed, he will have his last chance in fast company.

Some agreement will probably be reached by Collins and Doran to-day.

The Boston club spent a quiet Sunday. Collins was out of town, presumably at his home in Buffalo. Young and some of the others went on their regular fishing trip to Pine Lake and hardly a Boston player could be found around the hotel where the team was quartered, except at meal time. Young for Boston and Donovan for Detroit are the probable pitchers for to-day.

Every Little Girl Who Is Trying to Win the Doll House Should Cut Out This Picture for a Cover and

Start to Make a Happy Picture Book

One Little Girl Is Having Lots of Fun Making Her Book—Why Don't You Begin to Make One?

HOW many little girls have started a "Happy House" picture book? You have read what fun one little girl is having making her book? Why don't you try it?

The picture of "Happy House" printed to-day would make a splendid cover for your book. Cut out several sheets of firm paper, according to the outlines of the house, chimneys, gables and all and bind them together with ribbon or cord.

Then on the leaves you can paste the pictures of the various rooms with the stories to come of the doings of the Happy family. Try it.

The little girl who wins Happy House will have to spend a whole day looking over her precious belongings.

When it leaves the BOSTON AMERICAN office it will have to be very carefully packed up, for you see there are so many things in each room that it would never do to mix them up.

The House, you know, stands as high as most little girls' heads.

The Happys couldn't live comfortably in a small house, for they are a large family and have so much furniture that it takes a big house to hold it all.

I hope the child who wins Happy House will take very good care of it, for it is such a beautiful doll's house, and few children ever have as fine a one.

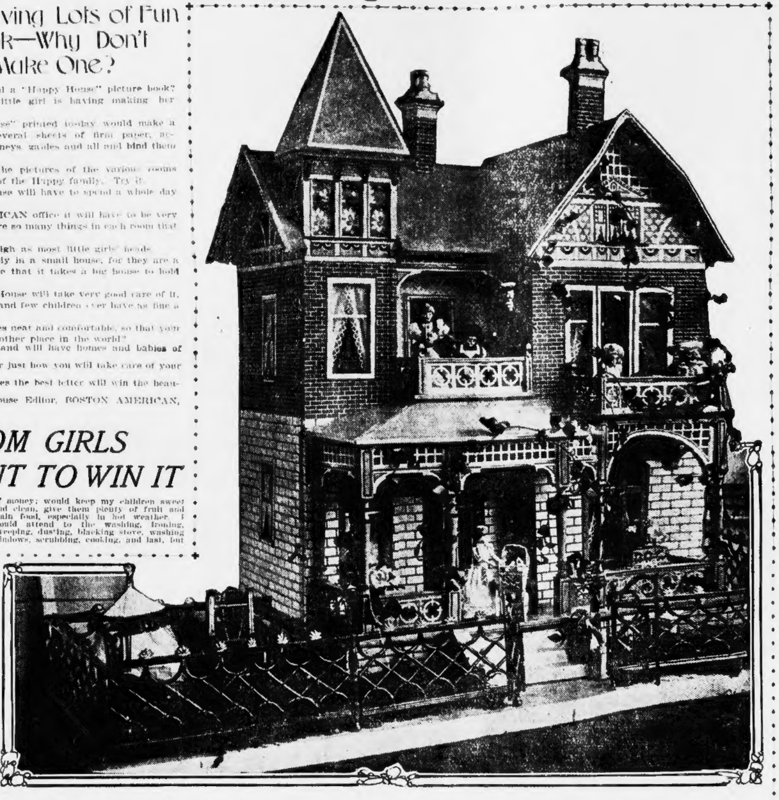
Are you going to keep your homes neat and comfortable, so that your children will love home better than any other place in the world?

Some day you will all be grown up and will have homes and babies of your own.

Write and tell the Doll House Editor just how you will take care of your homes and your children.

Remember, that the child who writes the best letter will win the beautiful big doll's house for her own.

Address your letters to the Doll House Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street, Boston.



THIS VIEW OF "HAPPY HOUSE" WOULD MAKE A FINE COVER FOR A PRETTY DOLL'S PICTURE BOOK

LETTERS FROM GIRLS WHO WANT TO WIN IT

Try Hard to Write a Better Letter Than the Best

SOME letters from girls who want to win the big doll's house will be printed every day. Here are some from to-day's mails. See if you can write a better letter than any of them.

COLD BATH DAILY

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

First I would get the breakfast, then go up stairs and dress the children and have them help me with dishes; then I would let them go out and play till luncheon time. After lunch would go to market and get the supper. After supper I would put the children to bed. For food I would not give them meat in hot weather or anything else that is heavy. I would also make them take a cold bath every day.

VIOLA GREENE, 11 years.
No. 280 Washington street, Malden.

WRITES IT IN VERSE

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

If the Happy House were only mine,
I would work and work for it all the time.
I would sweep the rooms and scrub the floors
And chase the flies out of the doors.
To Mrs. Happy I would be good
And do for her all the work I could.
To the darling children I would show
All about manners that they should know.
I would choose my vegetables with care,
So the family would get fat on my bill of fare.

ESTHER HARTNETT, 10 years.
No. 28 Marton street, Natick.

FIRM PUNISHMENT

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

I would keep my house as clean and tidy as I could. I would keep it in good order, and with certain duties on certain days. I would do my best to make it a cheerful and happy home. I would treat my children very kindly when they did right. I would not whip them if they did wrong, nor would I scold them. I would speak to them kindly and correct them. But if they did wrong as before I would give them a firm punishment, as not leaving them out to play evenings.

LEONA LILLEY, 12 years.
No. 202 Prospect street, Lawrence.

HER DEAR HUBBY

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

I would have a perfect system about my housework, would never leave until to-morrow what could be done to-day, would attend to all marketing, paying cash and getting the best of food. I would do all dressmaking and millinery for myself and children, in that way saving a large amount of money; would keep my children sweet and clean, give them plenty of fruit and plain food, especially in hot weather. I would attend to the washing, ironing, sweeping, dusting, blacking stove, washing windows, scrubbing, cooking, and last, but not least, I would have every comfort for my dear hubby.

CARRIE A. BUSSEY, 13 years.
No. 51 Brookline street, Cambridge.

BE METHODICAL

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

In the morning after I get up I would air the rooms, then get the breakfast, then make my beds, brush and dust my rooms, then I would wash the dishes, clean up the kitchen, then prepare the dinner. I would treat my children as my mother treats me.

PORTIA SKINNER, 11 years.
No. 2 Smith avenue, Roxbury.

HER OWN COOK

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

I would first see that the house was well aired, that the stove was clean and the sink was well scrubbed. I would have the cellar always well cleaned. I would teach my children to love God, be obedient, kind and gentle. I would give them healthy food and send them to bed early. I would do my own cooking, so I would know it was pure. I would let the sun come in every room and not shut it out. The floors would be washed twice a week.

JANET PARIS, 12 years.
No. 7 Almy street, Providence, R. I.

NO TRUST PRODUCTS

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

If I win your doll house I will care for my children in all ways, most of all to love their country the same as I do, and become good Christians. Then I would do my housework. I would have a garden and raise all the vegetables and fruits that my family would need, so as to prevent buying products owned by trusts.

ELLA MILLER, 8 years.
No. 37 Hall street, Lawrence.

EARLY TO BED

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

If I was keeping house and had children, I would get up at half past 5, make the fire, wake up the children, get them ready for school, give them their breakfast, wash breakfast dishes, make beds, sweep and dust the rooms, get dinner ready, give children theirs, wash dishes, send children to school, have a lunch ready for them at 4 o'clock, make supper at 6 o'clock, give children theirs, undress them and put them to bed at half past 7, and go to bed myself at half past 8. I think that would be a good day's work.

ROSALIE A. POMES, 11 years.
No. [illegible] street, South Boston.

TWO MORE WOMEN SHOPPERS IDENTIFY THEIR PICTURES

Women shoppers are getting right after the BOSTON AMERICAN camera man these days. These snapshots are being identified almost daily.

Saturday two women shoppers identified their pictures and each received the reward of $2 which is offered as the daily prize.

Saturday's snapshot was claimed by Miss MacDonald of East Concord street before the day was over. She saw the photo in an early edition and promptly claimed the reward.

The picture was taken near Houston's on the corner of Temple place and Washington street, Friday about noon.

The snapshot of a woman shopper in Thursday's BOSTON AMERICAN was an excellent likeness of Mrs. Jennie Lynch of No. 246 Main street, Everett.

Mrs. Lynch was snapped at Summer corner as she was hurrying along on her way to Nantasket. On her return from her outing she was amazed to find her photo in the paper, and was delighted with the reward of $2 which was attached.

Moral: Watch out for the camera man. He may get you any day. When he does, call and get your money.

A TASTY ENTREE

FOR a tasty entree with the meat course stuff halves of green pepper shells with boiled rice, into which has been stirred Parmesan cheese.

Allow a couple of tablespoonfuls of cheese and one of melted butter to every cupful of rice. To prepare the peppers wash them, cut them in half lengthwise and take out the seeds. Heap the rice in them, put them in a tin, cover and bake for half an hour. Then take off the cover and brown the rice.

SLEEPING OUT OF DOORS

"Oh, my Arizona bedroom is ventilated right;
Every breeze that sweeps the heavens
Comes to me with blithe 'Good night!'
Comes to me with touch of blessing
And of ozone—one drink more!
In my Arizona bedroom, that is large as all outdoor."

We can come as near as possible to an Arizona bedroom with a cot on the porch or a hammock under the trees, breathing God's pure air all night, waking refreshed.

When You Are at Business, Be Business Women Only; After That Play as Hard as Ever You Like

By Beatrice Fairfax

DON'T fall into the habit of thinking that the world owes you a living.

The world owes you just exactly what you are willing to work for.

We are all in the race, men and women, to get the most we can out of life.

Some of us succeed, some of us fall by the wayside, but as a rule the one who tries hard comes out well to the fore.

Don't go at your work in the spirit that you are conferring a favor on your employer.

There is no favor on either side.

You are there to do your work to your best ability, your employer to pay according to what you are worth. That is a perfectly fair arrangement.

Attend to Business

IF you want to rise in your business you must be willing to do your share and sometimes a little more than your share of work, and do it well.

The way to bring yourself under your employer's notice is by always being interested in your work.

The office boy who is alert and willing is soon promoted and the same rule applies all through business.

Sometimes girls think it unfair when they are not allowed to laugh and chatter during business hours.

They should not feel that way, for a business office is no place for frivoling.

If their work is such that talking does not interfere with it well and good.

But there is very little work that can stand the test of divided attention, and it stands to reason that two girls cannot hold an animated conversation and attend to their work at the same time.

Your employer pays you for a certain number of hours. If he pays you well and treats you fairly you certainly owe it to him to spend the hours that he pays for in his service.

Be Obliging

NOTHING pays like making yourself agreeable and obliging to your fellow employes.

Don't be stand-offish and taciturn. A pleasant word costs nothing and makes many a friend.

Make the office boy your friend; he can make things very disagreeable for you if he does not like you.

Have a pleasant word for the janitor and the scrub woman.

Don't wear your best clothes to the office.

Dress neatly and serviceably. Beads and laces and ribbons are for dress-up occasions.

A good deal of this ground has been gone over before, girls, but it is the sort of things that need repetition to impress them properly.

When you are at business be business women only; after that play as hard as you like.

What to Take Along on Your Vacation

IT should be remembered that first impressions go a long way, and when travelling to seaside or country resort this should be borne in mind.

Naturally a hotel or boarding house proprietress likes to receive visitors attired in fashionable costume, as this in a way acts as an advertisement for them. They do not, therefore, give the dowdily dressed person nearly such a warm welcome, and although she has to pay the same money, she has not made a good impression, and as by her dress it appears that "anything will do," so the proprietress of the hotel or boarding house is apt to think, and may act in accordance.

It is not at all necessary to don your Sunday best to present a good appearance when going on a journey. The practical girl will always see that her wardrobe contains a serviceable, well-made cloth costume, and nothing will be found more suitable than this to travel in.

The Traveling Hat

As regards headgear, a hat that has little trimming is best, and it should have only a small brim, so as not to cause discomfort by coming in contact with the back of the seat of the railway carriage. Dark gloves should be worn, and a pair of nicely fitting shoes.

When going on a long journey, the general tendency is to wear a long cloak. This is a mistake, and will be found to hamper one just when the free use of the arms is needed. A cloak is, however, almost a necessity, so it should just be put on when required, and not worn all the time.

A tweed costume is most useful when travelling some distance, especially if a boat journey has to be taken. This will stand a good deal of hard wear, and does not so show the dirt. The most suitable hat to wear on board is a motor cap, as this is comfortable and not inelegant on some people.

Woman's Secrets

French and American women always appear smart and well dressed. They know the secret of choosing colors that blend with their hair and eyes, styles that suit their figures and costumes altogether in keeping with the situation.

The greatest mistake, and one which has doubtless spoiled many trips, is the taking of too much luggage. If your clothes are chosen wisely, one trunk is all that is necessary for even a most extensive journey; it will hold all the clothes one can well take care of or need, unless, of course, they are visitors at some one's private house.

Sidney Warwick's Great Story of Present-Day American Life,

"SHADOWS OF NEW YORK"

[illegible] by American-Journal-Examiner.

HE saw the drowsiness creeping over Grieve as he sat there, blinking down at the stage. Through the strains of music he heard Grieve's voice murmuring:

"Funny how—how sleepy I feel! Better be turning in and—and saying good-night."

Good night!—two words summing up the climax of the night's unrest! The man's own farewell to life.

Haggard sat trying to fight the crowding fears, trying to think coherently. He must step carefully; if he were only prudent and cool, surely he had little to fear. On Grieve were the cards he had had printed bearing the name of De Graves. Grieve's own shame of his career as a clerk, and his anxiety to hide all connection with that humble position he had filled, would be Haggard's safeguard now.

At the hotel he was only known as De Graves. He was wearing new clothes, new linen, new everything; if marked, his linen would bear the name De Graves. Circumstances had fought for Haggard.

And the man was, so far as he knew, comparatively friendless; he would drop out of the world unmissed. The clerks at the office who had seen him, Haggard, leave with Grieve, reading of a man found dead in the music hall would never suspect the identity of Mr. De Graves.

Playing a Part

Or, even if foul play were suspected, and it became known that he, Haggard, had been in the dead man's company, who would suspect him of having killed the clerk whom for faithful service he had recently promoted to a managership?

He would explain that Grieve seemed drowsy when he left him in the theatre, but that he had no suspicion of anything wrong; that perhaps he had been drinking with doubtful companions.

The packet! He must not leave that!

He half rose, steadying himself, and bent forward in the darkened box, while his hand swiftly sought the other's breast pocket; Grieve was breathing stertorously.

He did not speak, but he seemed to turn his eyes up to Haggard's face accusingly, and under their fixed stare Haggard could have cried out in the horror that was on him; he had to set his teeth to keep the sound stilled.

The packet was in his possession now. He groped stumblingly to the door. As he opened it he looked back to where Grieve sat. No movement from the figure there. No sound, except the gay, exhilarating music and the laughter and applause of the audience. No other sound.

Haggard passed through the door of the box.

With a start he saw that two of the theatre attendants stood talking not half a dozen yards away; did they suspect anything of that drama that had been played out in silence in the dim box? But how could they? Yet he must play his part to guard against possible subsequent suspicion.

A Silent Figure

He turned and looked back into the box.

"Well, good-by again, old man!" he said, loudly enough for the attendants to hear. "Sorry I've got to run away; but you'll find your way back to the Rillington Hotel all right. I'll look you up there if I can find time when I'm back in town. Good night!"

He closed the door and walked away past the two attendants down the stairs, all his hatred and passion burnt out and dead, with fear at his elbow like an invisible shadow, out into the street.

Behind him, in the great music-hall, in a private box, a figure sat staring stonily down at the stage out of the dim, shadowy theatre, so still and motionless that it might have been a dead man, for whom the animated scene on the brilliantly lit stage was being played—a dead man sitting now as a mere spectator at the great comedy Life, in which he would never play again.

Sat still staring with gray face and deep-set eyes, till the ballet was over, and the lights were turned up, and the orchestra played the National Anthem while the audience crowded out, laughing and talking, in the square.

The figure with the gray face still did not stir; still sat staring down in the same attitude at the emptying house.

In Times square Philip Haggard called a hansom.

A Familiar Voice

He found himself looking stupidly at the cabman, not knowing where to tell the man to drive, his one thought being to get away from the place where the orchestra was filling the theatre with strains of lively, mocking music, and a man sat with a gray, rigid face. It was a moment or two before he could collect his thoughts and pull himself together. Then he said:

"Brooklyn Bridge."

The hansom bore him swiftly through the lighted streets, away from the great building that gleamed with amber and crimson lights. Fear crouched beside him in the cab.

At the end of the Bridge he alighted and dismissed the cabman. He walked into City Hall Park, past the seats where men and women sat or slept.

As he passed, he was conscious that one of these outcasts, the wreck of a woman in tatters, with a face so marred by vice and dissipation and drink that one could not contemplate it without a shudder, rose and came toward him with a whine:

"Kind gentleman, for the love of Heaven, could you——"

Haggard turned his face toward her, as the whining voice pierced his abstracted mood. And as she saw his face under one of the lamps, the woman paused with an odd abruptness in her begging appeal for money and stared at him in silence for a moment; then went back to her seat.

A Blank Lie

Her action startled Haggard, still further unnerved him. What did the woman see in his face that made her think better of her whining appeal? What had made her suddenly stop and stare so intently? It could not show in his face that——

And the man who was dead, even when barely half-sober, had said that he, Haggard, looked altered and strange; had this outcast woman seen the same look?

On an impulse Philip Haggard turned.

On the seat the woman in rags was staring curiously after him, saying something to a companion in misery by her side, jerking her thumb after him. She was speaking of him, evidently; what was she saying?

Haggard quickened his steps.

At last on the Battery wall he paused, he drew the little green bottle that was empty now with a shudder from his pocket, and flung it far out into the river. Falling, it flashed for a moment in the gleam of a long quivering shaft of light that shuddered down on the restless water from one of the lamps. His troubled eyes followed it, as it was caught in the current and floated, bobbing, down the tide.

Then he took out the packet, read again the address in the shaky handwriting, tore it open.

The rest of Grieve's story had been a lie; this thing that had been Grieve's chief weapon of intimidation was that handwriting forged, and the packet a lie too. He tore off the cover and drew out the contents.

Inside were several sheets of paper—all blank.

HAIR
ON A
WOMAN'S FACE

By an improved method of electrolysis we remove for all time hair growing on the face. There is nothing that we know of so humiliating and embarrassing as this form of blemish. For 36 years we have devoted our time studying how to do this work better than any one else, until now we have a perfect system under control of perfect operators. If you have hair on the face come and have it removed forever.

A Plan to Be SURE Your Servants Serve Only You

Too Often You Elect Men to Office and They Serve Someone Else—Someone with More Money, Perhaps

It is an old story in politics—the election of a man to serve the PEOPLE and his continual serving of other masters after he gets into office.

You have seen it in Massachusetts so many times that it has ceased to arouse especial excitement. You have seen men in the Massachusetts Legislature, supposed to be the servants of the constituents who elected them, turn out to be the servants of the railroads, or the Gas Trust, or the financial magnates—or of the political bosses who are servants of the railroads, the Gas Trust, or the financial magnates, which is just as bad.

You have seen them vote away the people's rights, or refuse to vote for those measures demanded by the public interest.

Perhaps you have been to them afterward to protest, and they have said smoothly, "Why didn't you come to see me before the vote was taken? I supposed all my constituents wanted it." And you had to admit that you didn't realize what was on foot until it was all over, whereupon your politician, knowing perfectly well that it was not intended you SHOULD realize, expressed his sorrow that it was now too late to change things.

This has happened so many times that it is an old story. Its most striking recent example was the slaughter of the Overtime Bill, which would have prevented women and children from working nights in the great mills. It was defeated, as you will remember, by trickery and craft, in the Massachusetts Senate.

The friends of the working people, who wanted the bill passed and had the necessary votes SO LONG AS THEY WERE PRESENT TO WATCH THEM CAST, were left out in the cold by a disgraceful exhibition of lobby-organized sharp practice.

The friends of the Textile lobby and the Boston & Maine lobby, which engineered the trick, were secure in their victory.

Governor Guild, who didn't want to sign the bill and didn't dare veto it, was saved the embarrassment of having to do one or the other. (He repaid this good turn, you will remember, by selecting the one man whose efforts had more to do than anything else with the people's defeat for a nice position on the bench.)

All these things came to pass because the friends of labor, believing their cause had won, were caught off their guard.

The average citizen wants his servants in office to be fair and honest and just. He would like to be sure that they served him honestly, and know enough about what is going on to discount their excuses if they play false to him.

But he has neither the time nor the experience necessary to watch personally his representatives on Beacon Hill. He has his own business to attend to. THEY are playing politics for a living—most of them. And, as might be expected, they fool him.

But now there is suggested a plan which promises to prove very advantageous to the public and very distasteful to unfaithful servants of the people.

The Independence League of Massachusetts, branches of which are being enthusiastically formed by lovers of decency and fair play in government throughout the State, in its statement of principles, announces that it favors:

> "Careful and expert scrutiny of all proposed legislation affecting working people and the general public, to the end that acts against their interests may not be passed before their purpose is understood."

In other words, the league plans to have some one familiar with the ways of legislation AND LEGISLATORS watch the progress of lawmaking, sound a warning note when the rights of the people are threatened, and publish to their constituents the faithfulness or unfaithfulness of the public servants.

Such a course as this will go quite a way toward remedying things. It is true it won't make a crooked legislator more honest at heart.

But the knowledge that he is likely to be caught at his tricks, AND DEFEATED FOR RE-ELECTION IN CONSEQUENCE, is likely to make even the most arrogant corporation servant less free in selling the vote his neighbors have given him.

If this was the only commendable measure for which the Independence League of Massachusetts stands, it would entitle the organization to a wide measure of public favor.

Dinkelspiel on the Horse Trader

By George V. Hobart

SARATOGA, YESTERDAY.

MEIN LIEBER LOOEY—I vas sitting on der porch of der hotel here last night, using up my listeners on der beautiful strains of moosic vich floated across der moonlight, ven who dit you dink chaired himself near by me und began conversationing?

It vas Leopold Schmalz!

You haf often heard me specify Leopold Schmalz, der olt horse trader from Rochester—sure you haf, Looey!

He vas a great character, dis Leopold Schmalz, und many a time I haf laughed myself immovable at some of his horse trading peculiarisms.

He is here to see der races, und mebbe pick up a horse or two, if der moment vas propitious.

Dit I efer toll you, Looey, aboud der time Leopold sold der olt sorrel to a chentlemans by der name of T'eadore Bendix?

T'eadore vas a moosicker by his profession, but he vas in Rochester for a few veeks und he vished to buy a horse, so somebody sent him to Leopold Schmalz.

Leopold hat at dis time a olt sorrel horse vich vould nefer trafel ofer a half a mile vitoud balking.

Now, Looey, dis olt sorrel horse vas formerly a person mit its tail docked off short, but Leopold t'ought he could better sell der horse if it hat a long tail, so he glued on a tail vich he kept in der barn for dis purpose, alretty.

Vun of der pecularizing features aboud dis olt sorrel horse vas der fact dot yust before he vould begin to balk und stop dead in his tracks der right ear vould fly back und stay dare. Und yust before he intended to start up again der left ear vould fly back und choin der right ear. Den aft der olt sorrel vent choyously on his vay vunce more, both ears vould stand ouid straight und all vould be vell.

Der olt sorrel alvays made dese signals, rain or shine.

Und, moreofer, vunce dot olt sorrel's nose vas pointed for home he nefer stopped, but vent like der vind—ven it ain'd blowing very hard.

Vell, anyhow, T'eadore Bendix goes to Leopold Schmalz to inkvire aboud a horse, und Leopold hitches up der olt sorrel.

Vile hitching Leopold starts in to eggsplaination vot a smart idea dis sorrel is, und by der time dey got started ouid of der barn in der ba T'eadore has an idea he is riding behind Sysonby's' stepbrother.

Ven dey got ouid aboud half a mile back goes der sorrel's right ear und Leopold says, qvick, "Vo, vo, boy, vo!"

Of course der olt sorrel intentioned to vo anyvay, but T'eadore doan'd know it.

Den Leopold vould point at der scenery mit his vip und description it, all der time vatching der olt sorrel's left ear for der starting signal.

Bimeby back vould go der left ear und den Leopold vould stop descriptioning der scenery und mit a loud "Ged-dap!" der olt sorrel vould start off vunce more.

Dis vas kept up aboud four times und den all of a sudden T'eadore let ouid a roar.

"For der luff of Himmel!" yelled T'eadore, "doan'd you know dot I came ouid here to see dis horse go, und not to listen at your lectures on dis bum scenery. Vy, man, I haf been by Rochester many times und often before, und I know all aboud der sash factories und der orphan asylums, und now I vould t'ank you kindly to point der reins at dis horse und make him commence!"

"Ach, oxcoos! oxcoos!" set Leopold; "you vish to see him trafel, is it? So! I show you!"

Den Leopold turned der olt animal around, pointed his nose at der oats in der barn, und dot sorrel nefer stopped running till dey vas back home.

T'eadore bought der horse on der strength of dot return trip.

Dot afternoon T'eadore took der sorrel ouid for a leedle eggsercise. Pretty soon it began to rain, der glue melted, und ven T'eadore saw his horse's tail drop off he nearly fell ouid of der vagon.

Four hours later Leopold vas sitting in his barn door ven he saw a man running towards him vich looked someding like T'eadore und someding like a wigilance committee.

Der man hat a buggy vip in vun hand und a horse's tail in der udder, und a bonfire in both eyes.

Leopold took vun peep at him; den he fell backvards ouid of der barn vindow und hid for four days in his cellar.

But I doan'd dink T'eadore und Leopold efer met, because both of dem vas still alive und uninjured.

Yours mit luff,
D. DINKELSPIEL,

THE STENOGRAPHER

She Gives Her Candid Opinion of the Court That Recognized Obesity as a Cause for a Divorce

By Dorothy Dix

"WELL," exclaimed the Stenographer, in a razor-edged voice, "the matrimonial fat is in the fire this time, for sure. Before long the government will be handing our hero medals to everybody who has got the courage to get married. Sort of Victoria Cross business, you know—brave conduct in the face of great and uncertain risks."

"What's the matter now?" inquired the Bookkeeper, sympathetically.

"Matter!" cried the Stenographer, "why the Supreme Court has recognized obesity as a cause for divorce. Didn't you read the account in the papers the other day about the man who has just got a decree of separation from his wife because she got too plump to suit his idea of female pulchritude?

"Seems that when he married her she was a fairy, with what the novelists call a svelte figure, who barely made the hands move on a penny-in-the-slot weighing machine, and just because after they were married the lady qualified for the welterweight class the husband skidooed. Said his love balked at a triple chin, but that if she would train down to 130 pounds he would come back and remarry her. Did you ever hear the like of that?"

He Wanted a Kitten

"PERHAPS he wasn't in the wholesale line of affection," suggested the Bookkeeper, "and wasn't prepared to love so much wife. There's a difference, you know, between annexing a kitten and an elephant as a household pet."

"Nonsense," returned the Stenographer; "a woman's weight has got nothing to do with her loveableness. Of course, a man has got a right to pick out the sized wife he prefers, but after he gets her, and she behaves herself, and feeds him on the sort of pie he likes, he has got no right to give her the double cross because she gets a little hefty."

"N-n-n-o-o," admitted the Bookkeeper, "that's straight, and yet a man who is stuck on the living skeleton style of beauty must feel pretty well stung when he finds that the human snake that he tied up with is developing into a feather bed that waddles as it walks. Somehow men seem to prefer lady-loves put up in neat and compact packages. It takes the romance out of the thing to have to take two hugs at a waist to get around it."

"I suppose," said the Stenographer, scornfully, "that we will soon be having a revised marriage service that will go like this:

A New Marriage Ritual

"'I, M., take thee, N., to be my wedded wife; to love, honor and cherish, so long as you keep at your present weight.' And the poor little bride will humbly chime in, swearing to love, honor and keep thin, until death do them part.

"Haven't you got a photograph of the scene, with all the rubber-neck wedding guests whispering behind their hands that they bet that in five years she'll need to weigh on the stock scales, and then it will be the divorce court for hers?"

"Still," insisted the Bookkeeper, with a malicious grin, "it is hard on a man to marry for one thing and get another. When you pay as heavily for a thing as you have to for a wife, it's natural you should want her to come up to the specifications in the contract."

"Then," retorted the Stenographer, "marry for something better than looks. If you marry a woman merely because of her figure and complexion and hair you are bound to be sold out inside of five or ten years anyway. She'll deteriorate on your hands anyway you fix it, but if you marry a woman for her sense and liberality she'll get broader and more entertaining as the years go by. If you marry for sweetness and goodness she'll turn into a sugar saint before your eyes. If you marry one because she's thrifty and industrious, she'll make you richer and richer all the time. Weigh a woman's virtues instead of her body, and you won't need the services of the divorce lawyer."

"Oh, I wasn't urging my own point of view," protested the Bookkeeper. "Personally, I like ladies who have a well-fed appearance. You can't have too much of a good thing, is my motto, and so the fat woman gets me every time."

"Well," said the Stenographer, "this Supreme Court decision is a discourager of matrimony that takes the cake. It's bad enough to have to starve and suffer to acquire an hour-glass figure with which to catch a husband, but if you have got to keep up the inquisition in order to prevent his haling you into the divorce court the wedding ring is down and out.

"A twenty-three inch waist measure as the measure of a husband's love—is 23."

Little Editorials from the People

ARE WE DEGENERATING INTO A PLUTOCRACY?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Would it not be a good movement to start a school to teach the rising generation some of the leading principles of their own government and where it di[illegible]s from the governments of Europe, espec[illegible] that of Great Britain? It is almost la[illegible] able the ignorance of many of the young people with reference to this matter. It would tend to lessen the conceit of many, and they would learn that there are other countries besides this which have some institutions worth copying. A democracy which degenerates into a plutocracy should demand some attention from aspiring legislators.
